

INTRUST SUPER PRESENTS

SUPER 101

How Superannuation works

In general, employers must pay, on top of your income, super contributions of at least 9.5% of your annual salary into a super account. It is a tax effective means of accumulating wealth and generating income for your retirement.

When you start your first job

Your employer will ask you the name of your superannuation fund. If you don't have one, they will give you an account with the default super fund they believe best benefits their employees.

When you change jobs

To keep all your super savings together, provide your new employer with your Intrust Super account details. This will allow you to keep track of your super and pay the only one set of fees on your savings.

Combine your super into one fund

If you've changed employers, you may have super in more than one fund. Each of those funds will be charging you fees. Click here to combine your super and stop your savings being eaten by unnecessary fees.*

Boost your super

Make extra contributions into your super to grow your super balance. You can make these contributions from before or after tax monies.
